SynthYoga

Yoga that talks you through every pose

FOR PRACTICE

Pick a routine, press play and follow spoken pose names, alignment cues and breath pacing — so you can keep your eyes on the mat. Free, no ads, no account needed. About 290 3D poses are published as open data that anyone can browse, reuse and help refine.

Free · No ads · No account needed · Works offline · Open pose library

In the app

- Spoken pose names, alignment and muscle cues, with optional inhale and exhale pacing
- A 3D body from any angle, with a preview of what comes next; switch photo, 3D or muscles
- Quick starts: wake up, wind down, desk stiff, low back, calm, strength, short or breath only
- About 290 poses with Sanskrit names — explore by pose, muscle or similarity
- Build your own routines, or generate one from your goals, time and pace
- Open a teacher's shared link or QR and practise with the same cues
- Optional live camera feedback with spoken tips. Video never leaves the phone

And more

- Programs, streaks and reminders so practice sticks
- Guided meditations and breathwork after a session
- Practice Together: phones in the same room play one session in sync
- Learn articles, a Sanskrit glossary and a 3D muscle map — free for everyone
- Works offline; practice data stays on your device (optional sync to your Drive or iCloud)
- Cast to a TV; Wear OS reminders on Android

Open pose library

Only the pose library is open source — the apps are free but not. Pose data, bodies, catalog and example routines are CC BY-SA 4.0; the small 3D viewer is MIT. Corrections you contribute stay open and credited.

- Browse, download and reuse the poses in teaching materials, apps, research or art
- Edit joints in 3D in the browser and send the change with your suggestion
- Suggest a fix in words from any pose — no coding needed
- Share open-yoga-routine/1 JSON routines with other teachers and practitioners
